

YES, YOU CANNES

Whether you're film-watching, celeb-spotting, cafe-hopping or beach-bumming, the classic Riviera gem has it all in spades.

WORDS ROWENA CARR-ALLINSON

insider's guide)

> Set on the glittering Mediterranean Sea, Cannes is the beating heart of the French Riviera. It's a name synonymous with luxury, thanks to its pristine palm-lined seafront, grandiose hotels and elegant locals, and, not to forget, its annual film festival. The event is celebrating its 66th anniversary this month (15–26 May) and attracts the world's biggest celebrities.

> Much of the city 'hibernates' over winter but, come May, it's truly alive and kicking. Summer is super busy, so the best times to visit are spring and autumn. Sailing enthusiasts should time their trip with Cannes's boat show (10-15 September).

What's more, Cannes is ideally located, so you can also visit other Riviera gems, such as Nice or Monaco, along the most scenic road you're likely to encounter.

 ${f Must \, dos}\,_{{f La}\,{\mbox{\it Croisette}}}, {\mbox{\it or Boulevard de la Croisette, is the number}$ one place to see and be seen. The two-kilometre-long seaside street is home to designer stores such as Dolce & Gabbana, Dior and Fendi, as well as glitzy hotels. Each has its own private beach lined with sun loungers — and that's where you're most likely to catch an A-list celebrity giving interviews during the film festival, reclining on a pristine white lounger, nibbling on a low-calorie salad or propping up the bar and relaxing to the DJ's mellow tunes. Nearby Palais des Festivals (1 La Croisette) is the festival's giant concrete home. Built in 1982, it was tailor-made to host the event, and while the building may not be aesthetically pleasing, its red-carpeted staircase has become an icon of the movie world. It's also a good place to yacht spot, with some of the world's finest moored just steps away. One of France's most densely packed shopping areas, Rue D'Antibes, boasts high-street shopping and designer goodies such as Kenzo and Paul Smith — not to mention classic French brands Façonnable, Blanc Bleu and the chic Comptoir des Cotonniers. Here, people are so much in love with shopping there's even an annual shopping festival (www.cannes shoppingfestival.com) in March when stores celebrate with sales and catwalk shows

Bon appétit

For a small town, Cannes boasts a vast choice of restaurants — from the Michelinstarred starched-linen types where you'll need to dress the part to the more relaxed 'toes-in-the-sand' beach haunts where the theme is barefoot luxury and it's all about the party vibe, light bites and late nights.

FOR GOURMETS La Palme d'Or (top; 73 La Croisette; +33 4 9298 7414; www. hotel-martinez.com) is intrinsically linked to the film festival — named for the prestigious award and also hosting the jury dinner. Chef Christian Sinicropi has earned two Michelin stars with his daring and creative menu, and stunning presentation rivalled only by the Mediterranean views.

FOR PEOPLE WATCHING Le Bâoli

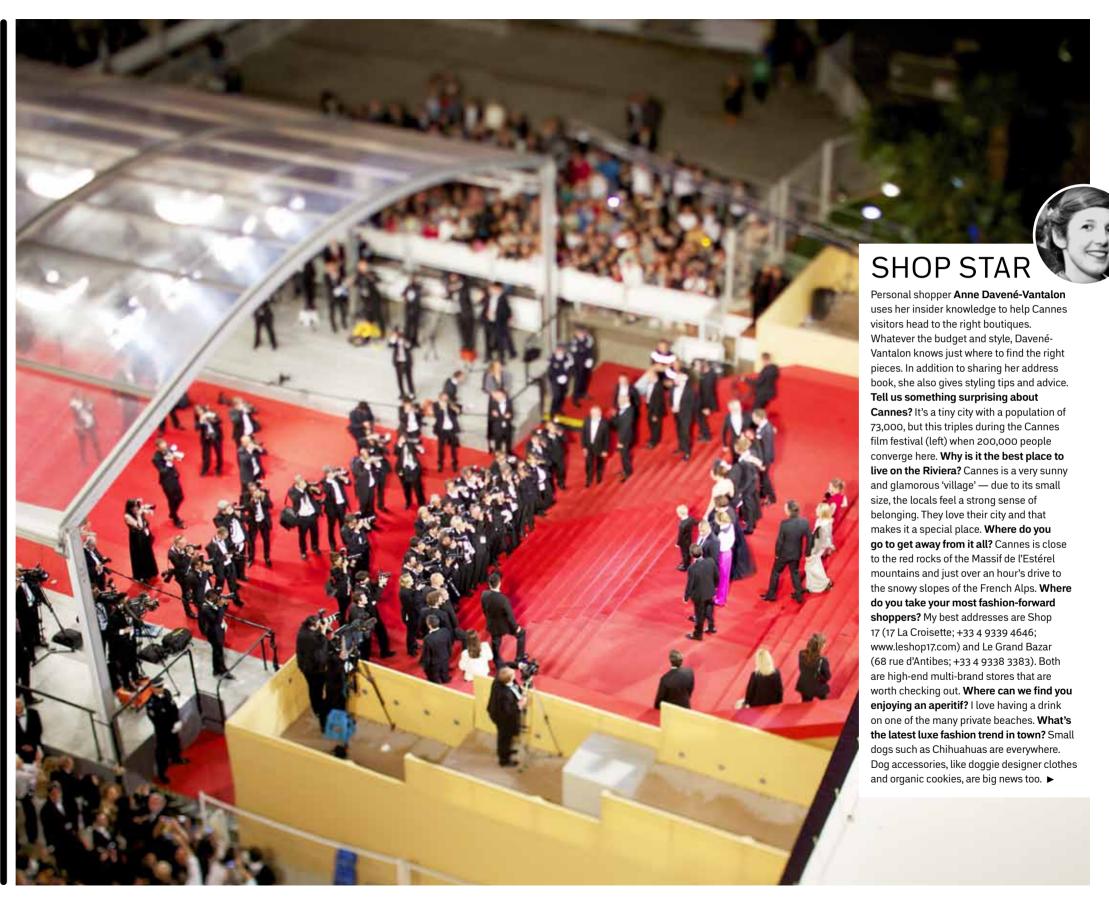

(above: Port Canto, La Croisette: +33 4 9343 0343; www.lebaoli.com) is where the A-listers like to party. With a huge al fresco restaurant and lounge overlooking the sea, it boasts an Asian-inspired menu and all the trimmings — ethereal cabanas, cosy couches, palm trees aplenty and an extensive stock of vintage Dom Pérignon. FOR MINGLING Le Cirque (30 rue Hoche; +33 4 9330 0238; www.lecirque cannes.fr) is the latest favourite among locals. It's a cosy Parisian-style cafe with a modern decor and the menu covers classics such as tuna carpaccio and Calamar a la Plancha. The place is part lounge, part retro, and very whimsical. ▶

From splendidly luxurious abodes to yachts you can check into and spend a few nights on, Cannes offers a range of accommodation options. DREAMBOATS For something different, and if budget is no issue, push the boat out (literally) and make a yacht your glamorous temporary home. Whether you prefer sail or motor, YCO Yacht (top; www.ycoyacht.com) offers dreamboats in all shapes and sizes. HIP & EDGY Ultimate party hotel 3.14 CANNES (5 rue François Einesy; www.314cannes.com) has quirky customised rooms (try the corset-topped velvet bed, above, or the sandy Oceanie rooms in wicker and dark woods), but the highlight is its rooftop pool overlooking the sparkling blue Mediterranean. VIP STYLE If you like the idea of staying in five-star luxury, book into legendary Art Deco hotel Le Martinez (73 La Croisette; www.hotelmartinez.com), and guiltlessly enjoy its stylish rooms, sleek bathrooms, gorgeous sea views, palm-fringed pool and fresh croissants for breakfast. OUT OF TOWN Take a 20-minute drive into the hills to La Bastide St Antoine (48 Ave Henri Dunant, Grasse; www.jacques-chibois.com). Chef Jacques Chibois has transformed this 18th-century Provençal farmhouse into a gourmet getaway with rooms featuring plush furnishings. CLASSIC CHIC Another grande dame, the Carlton Cannes (58 La Croisette; www.intercontinental.com) is one of the Riviera's most famous hotels. With celebrity kudos and sophisticated rooms, its exclusive beach has a zen-like teak deck, outdoor restaurant and an army of sun loungers.

Go beyond the bling and take a short drive inland to the arrière-pays (hinterland), where the rolling hills ooze lavender, rosemary and thyme, and offer views over Cannes's sparkling bay and the Mediterranean. The commune of Mougins (above and below) has long been a VIP escape — Pablo Picasso, Edith Piaf, Christian Dior and Catherine Deneuve have all hidden away among the olive groves, relaxing to the never-ending soundtrack of chirping crickets. The chic hilltop village is utterly picturesque (with its terracotta-tiled stone houses, pastel shutters and smattering of olive and cypress trees) and, as you'd expect from a smart French hideaway, comes with a luxurious hotel, Les Mas Candille (Boulevard Clément Rebuffel; www.lemascandille.com), reputed for its excellent cuisine, chic Provençal style and beautiful Shiseido spa.

Head up the little hill from the harbour to the old quarter of Le Suquet (right) where the Musée de la Castre (Place de la Castre; +33 4 9338 5526) is well worth the hike. This small museum has artefacts from all over the world (and endless views over the city). If it's not for you, simply roam the narrow backstreets, once home to fishermen. Meander past rue Saint-Antoine's many restaurants; stop for a drink at the colourful Le Jardin Secret (2 rue des Frères; +33 4 9338 7263), or simply stroll down to Place du Marché to the Marché Forville - a classic morning food market and the place to breathe in the aromas of Provençal produce. On Mondays, it's a flea market, which some say is even better than browsing the food.

Island gems

Escape the crowds and cruise out to the Lérins Islands. Just off the coast, it's only a 15-minute ferry ride across the crystal-clear waters to secluded beaches and fragrant pine trees. The most popular is Ile Sainte-Marguerite, and its fortress (Fort Royal de l'Ile Sainte Marguerite), where the infamous Man in the Iron Mask was held. It now houses the Museum of the Sea. Ilot de la Tradelière and Ilot Saint-Ferréol are both wild and uninhabited, but the most unusual of all has to be Ile Saint-Honorat, where a fifth-century monastery, Lérins Abbey (left), is home to award-winning wine-making monks. The island is still a haven of peace, with hooded figures going about their business far from La Croisette's throngs. 🚳
